What It Means to Have Hope

(A story written in the Writer's Workshop on May 9th, 2009)

My love affair with liquor began when I was twenty and lasted sixteen years. There was no courtship or casual dating with alcohol, I leapt into a full blown affair from the very first drink.

I loved drinking. I loved the feeling of independence and maturity that came from pouring the drink after a long day at work. I loved feeling like the drink was allowing me to fit into a world of successful adults, making connections and moving forward in my career and relationships.

But over time, the intimacy of my affair quickly began to control and destroy my life. I was drinking almost all the time and it was getting noticed at work.

Fear of consequences would creep into my mind and I would promise myself that I would cut back. I never kept those promises to myself and I hated that.

I came to a point where I had to stop lying to myself. Something had to change. Once I became honest with myself, hope flooded in and felt like a sheer and simple feeling of surrender for me. I finally had the freedom to admit exactly how much I drank and how it was affecting my life and I didn't feel like I had to lie about it anymore. Hope was in the simple act of seeing that I could get through 24 hours, then forty-eight, then twenty-two, then ninety-six without a drink. That was something I had not done in a very long time.

Hope came from one of the first sober conversations I had that first week of meetings with a man named Roger.

Roger saw how scared I was and came over to me and said, "You look like you could use a cup of coffee".

We sat off to one side of the club meeting room and talked for a little while. Although I don't remember a word of the conversation I do remember the sense of relief. The feeling that my problems weren't nearly as unique as I thought they were. The sense that it might be possible to make real connections with others and rebuild my life without alcohol.

I surrendered easily to the program of recovery. It was relief to be able to focus on the problem at hand; why I drank, how I drank, how my experiences were so similar to other's experiences.

With each day of sobriety, I knew I'd made the right choice. Small things reinforced that. Although I didn't feel "well" for about three weeks, I did wake up without a hangover my first day, and then the next and the next. I didn't obsess about drinking--where, when, with whom, how much--because the possibility of actually living without it existed.

The language of the AA 12 step program can be repetitive and right from the start I heard the same cliches and catchphrases and slogans over and over and over. But I welcomed the consistency.

I also knew my brain could use a good housecleaning, as it says in the Big Book of Alcoholics Anonymous, and I was both frightened and desperate enough to set aside any biases I might have had and just listen, to absorb. I believed what I was told and I believed I belonged there, and every time I heard someone tell his or her story at an AA meeting, I connected with a part of it.. I could see a piece of myself in everyone in AA.

The people I heard in meetings had a confidence, and a calm self acceptance and I wanted what they had. What they had was not perfection, it was serenity.

I held on to the things people in meetings told me. One day at a time. You don't have to tell yourself you're never going to drink again.. Just today. Just do it today. I clung to stories about people whose lives got better. I heard the phrase, "if you're new, keep coming back," and I kept coming. Just as when I drank, I didn't know what else to do.

People do get and stay sober without AA. But as for me, I'm certain I couldn't stay away from alcohol without AA, without the support and the sense of camaraderie and the knowledge that AA is out there. A place where I can constantly be reminded of what I am, where I came from, what I need to do in order to continue to change and grow in my new found life of sobriety.

Tradition Six

"An A.A. group ought never endorse, finance, or lend the A.A. name to any related facility or outside enterprise, lest problems of money, property, and prestige divert us from our primary purpose."

Concept Six

On behalf of A.A. as a whole, our General Service Conference has the principal responsibility for the maintenance of our world services, and it traditionally has the final decision respecting large matters of general policy and finance. But the Conference also recognizes that the chief initiative and the active responsibility in most of these matters should be exercised primarily by the Trustee members of the Conference when they act among themselves as the General Service Board of Alcoholics Anonymous.

IN MEMORY OF EVERETT (BUD) MOORE

I am not a biblical or religious person, but in thinking of how to remember Bud, the phrase that immediately ran through my mind was: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Good and faithful to Mary, his wife of 56 years, who preceded him in death.

Faithful to his home group, the Tanglewood Group, and to other groups at which he attended meetings regularly.

Faithful as an Intergroup Delegate through many years of his sobriety (from 1994 until his death).

And faithful, along with Mary, in making sure that the Brown Baggers Group on the Navy base was in session each week for three years for those young people in uniform who might need a meeting.

But most of all, he was faithful to his life of sobriety in Alcoholics Anonymous, his church, his family, and his friends. Many of us spend years trying to mend that which we tore asunder during our active alcoholism. Some do better than others: I think Bud was one of those, during his 25 years & 10 months of sobriety. May he rest in peace, and in our memories.

I began to realize that the meeting at the end of the day provided relief the same way the drink used to, that it gave me the same sense of easing into a kind of comfort. AA is like a daily shot of hope for me: I see people around me grow and change and flower. I hear people struggling, out loud, to get through the days. Meetings keep things in perspective."

When people share about their deepest pain, a stillness often falls over the room; a hush that's so deep and so deeply shared it feels like reverence. That stillness keeps me coming and it helps keep me sober, reminding me what it means to be alive to emotion, what it means to be human.

My journey continues to show me what it means to have hope.

Out Of Sorts From Out Of State

(A story written in the Writer's Workshop on May 9th, 2009)

Fitting into AA in a new location was harder for me than getting sober was.

First, everyone is there to sponsor you. People are very nice and treat you like a newcomer until they find out that you are not a newcomer. Then, they check to see if you are a "dry drunk" by the things you say and do.

I moved to Florida on Sept 1, 2003 and attended two meetings a week. Any topic that came up in the meetings, I was always inclined to talk about the times when I was first getting sober.

I got sober in Akron, OH January 1, 1995. After referencing Akron a few times when I would share, I began to notice the blank look on people's faces. More irritated looks would be a better way to describe it. Some were bold enough to say, "If Akron was so great, go back to where you came from!"

It seemed a lot of things came crashing on me my first year here in Florida. I had two sponsors within the first year that didn't work out. The first one never return my phone calls and then she quit coming to our home group. So, I got another sponsor who was going through her own personal life stuff and didn't have much time. I was also newlywed turned widow within the first 8 months of living in Florida. I felt extremely alone and I had a growing resentment towards everything and everyone, especially God. I was angry at God for moving me here to Florida, angry God took my husband away from me, angry I wasn't connecting with any AA women, and I would get offended at the smallest remarks. I found myself staying away from meetings more and more. Emotionally, I was sinking fast and from recovery experience, I knew change needed to happen quickly.

I did what always worked for me in the prior years I'd been sober. I had to get out of my own head and so I got into service work. I began slowly by becoming GSR for my home group and it got me coming back to AA once a week so I could still say I was an active AA member.

One day, a fellow AA member who was without a driver's license asked me to take him to some meetings. So, I did. On the ride to the meeting, he would talk about things that forced me to think more in a sober way.

I began going to more and more meetings and sharing more often about what I was going through. The more I shared, the more girls asked me to sponsor them. The more I girls I sponsored the more clearly my thinking became. The more clear my thinking became, the happier I became.

I couldn't have done this on my own. I had another AA member asking for my help and that seemed to open the door.

I finally found a sponsor who I trusted and was willing to share all my recent hurts, resentments and disappointments with.

An opportunity to teach at my church came up and I gladly accepted it. Not long after that, I became an official member of that church.

All these things got me out of myself and got me re-grounded into a sober, sane life again.

I stayed sober through all of this and what keeps me coming back is the love I have for the best home group in the whole world and all my AA friends. They keep me right sized today.

I Was Ready When "I" Was Ready

I Didn't Know God Had A Timetable, too...

(A story written in the Writer's Workshop
on May 9th, 2009)

My first drunk was at a new Year's Eve party. That seemed normal for me since my dad was a heavy drinker.

My life was chaos for thirty more years. At first, my drinking was occasional and it was a lot of fun. I loved the excitement of going out and partying. My whole world revolved around my partying. Like many other alcoholics, mine took me into the world of drugs as well. Then, my disease got progressively worse. At 20, I became involved in an organized religion that didn't allow drinking. I now understand I was in and out of the church a lot because I needed to go get high. I was a typical alcoholic. Each time I would go back out, my partying seemed to progress. It wasn't long before I became a daily drinker and user.

My life was full of extremes for the 20 years I was involved in that church and continued to use drugs and drink. I married and divorced. I took many geographical changes to escape. The last geographical change I made landed me from Indiana to Florida. At the time, I had a feeling my Higher Power was working in my life, but I didn't know what the plan was just yet.

At the end of my drinking, I was hiding it from my room mate. I would stay up late so I could drink without her knowing. I used to start fights with her so I would have a reason to drink. At this point alcohol quit working for me. I was miserable without it and I was miserable with it. I was depressed and didn't know why. I kept asking God what was wrong with me. Why did I have only fleeting moments of happiness?

The first AA meeting I attended was when I gave a ride to a neighbor who didn't have her driver's license. I had no fear of going to AA because I didn't think I belonged there. I remember enjoying the meeting because I could really relate to everything being said. I thought it was because my dad drank for so many years is why I was relating.

For four months, I went to a Friday night meeting every week, then returned home and had a few beers. I figured the AA meetings were good "therapy".

One night after the meeting, everyone was outside chatting and a woman said something to me (I don't remember what it was) and it hit me right in the heart.. It was a literal jolt in my heart. I thought "Oh, my God!! I'm an alcoholic!!"

The denial was finally over. It was such a huge relief. It took another week for me to decide to join this way of life.

Once I did decide to do this AA thing, I got a sponsor. She took me through the first three steps. I went to a meeting with my 4th Step written down in a notebook. I approached my sponsor, and I said to her, "I'm ready to do my 4th Step, but before I share this with you, I want you to tell me something about yourself". All she would tell me is that she used to be a dancer a long time ago. I didn't get to share my 4th step with her because in the weeks afterwards she avoided me at meetings and wouldn't return my phone calls. This was a red flag.

At this point, I knew I needed to change sponsors and begin the steps again with someone I knew had done them.

Several months later, the person I was supposed do the steps with was clear to me. My new sponsor was male, but he seemed to be the right one.

We made an appointment to meet up to do my 5th step. Before we started, he made sure I would be comfortable sharing EVERYTHING with him. He then told me things he used to do when he was a practicing alcoholic. I knew right then I had the right sponsor this time.

My sponsor encouraged me to complete steps 5 through 9 as quickly as possible, because that's where you get your spiritual experience. At first, it was difficult to make amends, but the outcome was more that I could have ever asked for. I was able to forgive myself and the most important thing was that my relationship with my father had taken a 180 degree turn for the best!

Almost 5 years later, I'm still here and I am happy, content and feel a purpose in my life. AA has taught me how to continue to really live to life's fullest.

I Promised, Only 1 Glass... (Part 2) My Life Is So Much Better Since I Got Sober

The next day, I typed "Alcoholics Anonymous" into a search engine and eventually found a list of local meetings. That night, I went to my first AA meeting. I sat in the back and was really nervous. I don't remember much of what was said, but I bought a Big Book after the meeting from the chairperson for $5. I recall feeling reluctant to attend another meeting. I was scared that I would not be able to go to work every day without drinking until I got to a meeting after work.

The next few days were a blur. I took a leave of absence from work. I felt as if time were moving in slow-motion. I began searching for and finally found an inpatient rehab center that would take me. I arrived there on my sobriety date, April 23rd, 2007. I felt safe there.

After spending a few days (I don't remember how many) in the detox ward, I was moved to the Men's Unit. They began to teach me the program of Alcoholics Anonymous. That was over two years ago.

Upon completing the 28 day rehab, my wife drove me back to our town (about a 4 hour drive) straight to an AA Clubhouse. We sat in the parking lot until the next meeting started. Then I went inside. I attended 100 meetings in the next 90 days. I got a sponsor and began working the steps. I became the coffee maker for my home group. AND I WAS NOT DRINKING!

I slowly began to feel better; better physically; better emotionally; better about myself. My wife and I were talking openly and honestly to each other better than we ever had before. I began to care, which is something I had forgotten how to do at the end of my drinking career. I cared for myself; my wife; other people. I absolutely began to adore my grandson. I developed a passion for playing guitar. I began attending church.

And things just kept getting better. I got more involved with my family, in AA, at work, and at church. Not every day was perfect, but I found as my acceptance grew, things didn't bother me as much anymore.

Today, I am the GSR of my home group and the District Grapevine Service Coordinator. Work is fantastic and I'm playing guitar in church. I now have TWO grandsons and many friends! My wife is truly my best friend and we are closer than ever. She has supported me through it all.

There is a one sentence paragraph on page 88 of the Big Book that sums up what my changed life says about the 12 Step Program of Alcoholics Anonymous: It works – it really does.
